

THE MAD HATTER CUSTOM TEA

Welcome to the Mad Hatter Custom Tea Station where you can create your own bespoke tea blends or mix and match tea bags.

Alice in the Village has proudly served Harney & Sons Teas since we opened in 2016.

How does it work?

We offer two types of teas, tea bags where the loose leaf tea is already placed in a sachet and is ready to use and loose leaf, where you can mix different blends and ingredients to create the perfect tea blend.

Tea Bags:

We offer over 40 different types of loose leaf tea bags flavors you can choose from.

You now have the ability to pick the quantity of bags and choose which flavors you would like get. Instead of getting a tin with 20 or 30 tea bags of the same flavor, now you can mix different bag flavors and choose your own quantity.

You can pick to place the tea bags in a custom tea tin from Alice in the Village (extra cost) or just receive them in a simple bag.

Loose Leaf:

We offer close to 60 flavors of loose leaf tea and about 25 add-on ingredients so you can mix your own custom tea blend.

Just pick any loose leaf flavors you want to mix, add addition ingredients like rose petals, fruits and herbs (add-on are optional) and we'll mix it to create your own custom blend.

Place the tea blend in a custom tea tin from Alice in the Village (extra cost) or just receive them in a simple bag.

*2 ounce of loose leaf tea makes about 20 tea cups.

Tea Type Guide:

Black Tea: While black teas are made from the same Camellia sinensis plant as all teas, the oxidation and processing is what distinguishes black teas from the rest. Premium black teas are withered, rolled, oxidized and fired in an oven, creating a warm and toasty flavor. The lengthier oxidation process causes the tea leaves to develop into dark brown and black colors. The flavors can range from malty or smokey to fruity and sweet. Black teas range from mellow teas from China to full-bodied teas from Assam, India

Green Tea: All green teas originate from the same species, the Camelia Sinensis. To make green tea, the fresh tea leaves are briefly cooked using either steam or dry heat. This process fixes the green colors and fresh flavors. The Chinese green teas are more mellow and smooth, while the Japanese green teas have the heft of rich, vegetal flavors, which comes from preservation of the chlorophyll. The general rule is that a cup of green tea contains about one-third as much caffeine as a cup of coffee.

Oolong Tea: Oolong tea is sometimes referred to as brown tea, halfway between a black and green tea. In many respects it is the most complicated tea to make, because the tea is only partially oxidized. Repeated rolling brings the tea to the desired level of oxidation, which is between the zero oxidation levels of green tea and high level of oxidation black teas undergo. However the reward for all that hard work is tea with great body, and the most intense, varied aroma and flavors. Many oolongs are creamy, their liquor literally coating your mouth like fresh cream. Others are almost effervescent, practically fizzing like Champagne.

White Tea: White tea is made from the young tea bud. It is plucked just before the leaf opens on the stem and is air-dried to lock in its color and flavor. The chlorophyll is not mature in this bud and that gives its "white" appearance. We add flavors to make delicate and delectable teas. Look for gently sweet notes ranging from honeysuckle to light maple sap, citrus fruit flavors like orange and lemon, and wisps of floral aromas, evoking jasmine and rose. The delicacy of white tea leaves allows wonderfully subtle flavors to flourish in your freshly brewed cup!

Herbal Tea: Herbal teas, also known as herbal infusions, are typically a blend of herbs, flowers, spices, and dried fruit. This blend of ingredients is then brewed in the same way as your favorite traditional tea, either loose or in tea sachets or bags. By combining quality ingredients, blends can be created that calm, invigorate, or treat minor ailments. Colors and flavors range from light and fruity to vibrant and spicy, to match your mood.
